Too Much of a Good Thing

If a little soccer is a good thing, then soccer practices and/or games every day must be even better. If one music experience is a good thing, then four or five ensembles/performances must be even better.

Or so it would seem. We are hearing from you regularly that once a child develops an interest in an activity, that activity demands more and more time from your family schedule.

At Bethel we try very hard to maintain a balance in the options we offer our families for children and youth. We want to assure you that while we offer many ministries for you and your children, very few, if any, of them are seen as "have to's." We want the ministries in which your family participates at Bethel to be a refuge from the demands of the secular world, not an added stress to your family life.

We believe strongly that nurturing faith in the home is one of the most important factors in raising children of faith. When families live out their faith on a daily basis, when weekly worship is a family habit, and when parents make faith nurturing in the home a priority for their children, the ministries offered by the church become supplemental.

This flies in the face of how many of us were raised. For generations, there has been a view that if the church offers something, we better go.

If this has been your view, we would like to encourage you to alter it. Don't guilt yourself or your children into signing on for every Youth Ministry option that comes along. Instead, pick and choose carefully those options that will support and nurture your family without adding stress to your already busy lives.

There are many ways to nurture faith in our children. At Bethel we are committed to being your partner in this very important ministry. Please let us hear how we can continue to do this in new and better ways.
